U. S. Batteries Beat Off Heavy Assault On Island Fortress

By the Associated Press

U. S. anti-aircraft batteries beat off a violent five-hour attack by Japanese planes upon Corregidor, island fortress at the entrance to Manila, the war department said today, while on the nearby Bataan Peninsula, General Douglas MacArthur's "last stand" army of American and Filipino troops still battled against Japanese invasion forces.

A war department communique said at least three Japanese planes were shot down in the assault on Corregidor.

Tokyo reports said Japanese warships were also attacking the island stronghold.

A war department bulletin said at least 60 Japanese bombers took part in the raid, but failed to inflict material damage on the fortress.

American casualties in the attack, which took place yesterday, were listed as 13 killed and 35 wounded.

"There was a marked lessening of enemy ground attacks," the communique said.

"American and Philippine troops were consolidated in new positions, where organized resistance to Japanese attacks will be intensified.

A German radio broadcast, quoting dispatches from Tokyo, said the attack on Corregidor was intended to prevent the arrival of reinforcements for General MacArthur's beleaguered troops.

The broadcast also asserted that departing U. S. transports had been bombed by Japanese planes.

Corregidor fortress, bristling with 12-inch guns and powerful anti-aircraft batteries, lies 27 miles southwest of Japanese-occupied Manila.

The hard-pressed American defense forces, reported yesterday to have taken up "strong positions" on a shortened line north of Manila after the fall of the Philippine capital, were pictured today as fighting a delaying action in this second phase of the battle of Luzon to permit mobilization of full Allied power in the Pacific.

On the Malayan front, spirited British resistance was reported yesterday to have beaten off three new Japanese attacks by land and one by sea as the invaders increased their pressure in the drive toward Singapore.

British Far East headquarters said four troop-laden Japanese barges were sunk and a small steamer set afire by British artillerymen in frustrating a landing attempt in lower Perak.

In a series of three land attacks, British headquarters said, the Japanese suffered between 400 and 500 casualties. The locale of the fighting was not disclosed but apparently developed along the Perak river, 240 miles northwest of Singapore.

The Berlin radio quoted Tokyo sources as saying that two-thirds of the British forces in Malaya had been wiped out in the fighting at Kuantan. This seemed a typical example of Axis propaganda.

Although, undefended Manila and the dismantled Cavite naval base had fallen, Washington military quarters expressed belief that the United States and Philippine troops were in position to keep up a prolonged battle while other anti-Axis forces were mustered at Singapore and in the Dutch East Indies.

Dark spots in the Allied picture were brightened by a Chungking announcement of a decisive turn in the third battle for Changsha, Hunan Province capital, with 15,000 Japanese reported killed or wounded during Chinese counterattacks.

A German sequel to Napoleon's disastrous retreat from Russia in the winter snows of 1812 stared Adolf Hitler in the face today as Soviet troops were reported to have recaptured the historic city of Maloyaroslavets, 65 miles southwest of Moscow.

A bulletin from Hitler's field headquarters said the German army was in a "critical position" in the winter snows of 1812.

ATTACK ON CONVOY IS REPULSED

Admiralty Announces That At Least Three German Submarines and Two Long-Range Enemy Bombers Had Been Destroyed During Four-day Battle on the Atlantic

LOSSES ADMITTED IN MEDITERRANEAN CLASH

London, Jan. 3.—(P)—The Admiralty announced today that at least three German submarines and two German long-range bombers had been destroyed by the defenders of a convoy in the Atlantic.

A bulletin said that more than 90 per cent of the convoy, consisting of more than 20 freighters, had reached port after a four-day running battle. Only two merchantmen, totalling 6,193 tons, were lost, it said.

Loss of the British destroyer Stanley, a former United States vessel, and the auxiliary warship Audacity also was acknowledged.

Both warships were torpedoed in the German attack which lasted from Dec. 17 to Dec. 21, the Admiralty said.

The convoy was reported to have consisted of more than 90 merchant ships led by Vice Admiral Raymond Fitzmaurice, a veteran as commodore of convoys who was named a knight of the British Empire in King George VI's New Year's honors list.

Loss of the British cruiser Neptune and the destroyer Kandahar through enemy mine action in the Mediterranean was acknowledged today by the Admiralty.

The T.175-ton Neptune was sunk by a mine; the Kandahar, sailing with the Neptune at the time, also suffered damage from a mine and had to be sunk by British forces, the admiralty declared.

The admiralty thus far has announced the loss of 12 cruisers and 56 destroyers, including the Neptune and Kandahar, since the war began in 1939. The include domination as well as British ships.

TWO KILLED AND THREE HURT AS BUILDING FALLS

Party of Boys Playing Table Tennis and Frolicking to Swing Tune From Juke Box Changes to Scene of Death and Wreckage

IS CAUSED BY A CAVE-IN

Mt. Braddock, Jan. 3.—(A)—A happy gathering of boys playing table tennis and frolicking to a swing tune from a juke box changed to a scene of death and wreckage as the community recreation center building collapsed in this Fayette county town near Uniontown yesterday.

Two were killed and three injured in the collapse, caused by the cave-in on an abandoned coal mine tunnel under the one-story brick building, whose foundation dropped about six feet.

Five boys ranging from 14 to 18 years escaped injury, scrambling to safety as bricks and rafters of the old structure crashed about them in a cloud of dust.

The dead were Alfonso Lamb, 20, and George Beatty, 15. Evelyn Bradley, 19, junior instructor at the center, Robert Beatty, 18, brother of George, and Marvin Means, 14, were injured.

Lamb, who was playing table tennis, was crushed under the debris, while his opponent, Albert Christ, escaped without a scratch. In death, Lamb still clutched a ping pong paddle.

George Beatty was among a group listening to music from the juke box. He died in an apparent attempt to shield Miss Bradley. A falling beam broke his back and a coal stove upset, the live coals setting fire to his clothing. Rescue workers quickly put out the flames.

The survivors said they had no warning of the collapse.

The 90 x 70 foot recreation center formerly was a garage owned by a coal company which operated the mine.

PRICE-FIX MEASURE IS READY

Flexible Wartime Control Legislation, Designed to Save Government Billions of Dollars and Protect Public From Soaring Living Costs, Completed By Senate Banking Committee

LEADERS ANTICIPATING HEATED CONTROVERSY

Washington, Jan. 3.—(P)—A flexible wartime price control measure—designed to save the government billions of dollars and protect the public from soaring living costs—was ready today for senate consideration.

Affecting virtually every phase of the nation's commercial life, the bill seemed sure of arousing a heated controversy as did similar legislation which cleared the house last Nov. 28.

Members of the senate banking committee worked until after dark last night to complete their draft of the bill, although the first session of the 77th congress already was ended. Congress reconvenes Monday, but leaders indicated that senate debate on the measure would not begin before Wednesday to enable lawmakers to study and digest it.

Senator Brown (D-Mich.), who will serve as floor manager for the bill, said it would aid the all-out war effort by stabilizing prices of everything from "guns to butter" and would strike directly at profiteering, speculation, inflation and hoarding.

Brown said the bill prepared for senate consideration seeks to hold down the cost of living.

Members Will Be Trained Through Regular Schools In Fighting Evolution, Incendiary Bombs, Sabotage, First Aid, Etc.

Warren county is in Zone One under the state plan of the auxiliary service. Besides Warren this zone consists of Crawford and Erie counties. The set-up operates with a warden for each zone and a county warden for each county. For Warren the county warden is Chief Douglas C. Kropf, of the local department, who was appointed last Friday.

INSTRUCTORS NAMED

At the organization meeting last night Chief Kropf appointed the following men wardens for their respective districts: C. L. McNett, Clarendon; Charles Slater, Sheffield; C. R. Jones, Russell; Albert Kai, Sugar Grove; L. L. Johnson, Youngsville; Ralph N. Sumner, Tidoute.

A special district has been designated for the North Warren State Hospital and North Warren proper. D. Ward, of the hospital, was assigned warden of this district.

Each district is recruiting from 25 to 35 auxiliary firemen per county. These men will be trained in fire fighting through regular training schools in fire fighting evolution, incendiary bombs, sabotage, first aid and rescue work. This will form a larger nucleus for each department to call upon. In Warren alone there will be more than 100 auxiliary firemen.

This auxiliary fire service does not conflict or overlap in any way the service of the county air raid wardens but is set up wholly to operate during an emergency in the borough or county, whether from sabotage, explosions or other emergencies, including conflagrations. The men will do actual fire fighting service.

In each district of the county where training schools will be held instructors have been appointed from local fire departments. Chief Kropf is the county training instructor. Assisting him will be Captain Charles Albright, who will have complete charge of teaching fire alarms and mutual aid calls. He will also have charge of instructing the paid firemen in the mutual aid system and will have ten men as operators and messengers. Also assisting the county instructor will be Lieutenant E. R. Springer, who will have charge of the training class for local firemen in fire fighting evolution and use of equipment.

In addition the following have been named district training instructors for the county: Leonard Falbriski, Clarendon; George Slater, Sheffield; Gail Springer, Russell; Alden Abbott, Sugar Grove; Merle Welch, Youngsville; Ray Afiskimon, Tidoute. For the special district of North Warren and the State Hospital the instructor is William Cooke. With the exception of one, all these instructors have either graduated from a state fire school course or have attended fire college at State College, Pa. These men will be responsible for training the entire group of auxiliary firemen to be able to operate with the local fire departments.

26-NATION ACCORD IS REVEALED

War Councils of the United Allied Countries Seek to Use Every Minute Bought With Lives of MacArthur's Men to Bolster Singapore and the Dutch East Indies to Muster Force for Pacific Offensive

RUSSIA NOT BOUND TO MILITARY ACTIVITY

Washington, Jan. 3.—(P)—The 26-nation solidarity pact announced yesterday in Washington was hailed in British quarters today as the death knell of the Axis and the beginning of a new League of Nations fashioned "under better auspices."

"This declaration," the London News Chronicle said, "holds out hope of more than victory. All nations concerned have voluntarily subscribed to the principles of the Atlantic charter."

"They plan to work together in peace as well as in war for common ends. A new League of Nations is arising under better auspices."

The London Daily Telegraph declared the "tripartite pact" against the night and resolution behind the pact.

"Besides this treaty of Washington," the Telegraph said, "the tripartite pact of Berlin must appear a puny affair even to its own authors and to the quislings who have made it ridiculous with their servile signatures."

"For Hitler, Mussolini and Tojo the Washington treaty is the writing on the wall."

The Daily Sketch declared the Washington agreement to crush the Axis was the "greatest news of the war. The bond will link the Allies firmly together and fortify their hearts for victory."

Washington, Jan. 3.—(P)—American and Filipino troops fought on against awesome odds today to drain from Japan the fullest blood price for the Philippines and to hold off new Japanese blows to the south for as long as possible.

Although no official word of the struggle has been received since the announcement yesterday of the fall of Manila and the Cavite naval base, military quarters expressed the belief that General Mac-

PLANT WORKER'S ARM AMPUTATED AFTER ACCIDENT

An injury received while he was working at the plant of the National Forge and Ordnance Company, Irvine, about 9 p. m. Thursday resulted in the amputation of the left arm of Floyd Conklin, 31, of Youngville. Another workman, Donald Warner, also of Youngville, received less serious injuries.

According to company officials, the two men were engaged in changing dies on a large hammer in the forge department of the plant. While thus engaged, the steam pressure on the hammer went off, permitting the heavy machine to fall.

Conklin's arm was so badly crushed that it was necessary to amputate it near the shoulder. Warner had both hands severely bruised.

Conklin is a patient in the Warren General Hospital where his condition was described as fair today. Warner was discharged after treatment.

ENROLLMENT OF VOLUNTEERS IS GREAT SUCCESS

While all returns are not in, Warren county's enrollment of volunteer workers for defense activities yesterday was declared very successful by Donald E. Schuler, who was in charge.

In the enrollment, a large number of men and women throughout the county offered their services to the Warren County Civilian Defense Council for various activities which are being planned for the near future.

For the benefit of those who did not enroll yesterday, permanent enrollment centers have been established at the Boy Scout headquarters, Girl Scout headquarters and the county commissioners' office in the court house, it was announced.

Dr. Warren will preside in his church, the First Presbyterian, on Wednesday evening, when the speaker will be Rev. J. H. Crulickshank. The Scripture lesson will be presented by Rev. J. A. Davidson and prayer will be offered by Rev. M. J. Harding.

Grace Methodist church will be host on Thursday evening, Rev. Harold Knappenberger presiding. In addition to the speaker, Rev. E. K. Rogers, ministers participating will be Rev. Ernest Kaebnick for the Scripture and Rev. Wroth for the prayer.

WIDELY KNOWN SPORTSMAN DIES VERY SUDDENLY

Frank G. Norris, 54, Butler county treasurer-elect and widely known outdoor sportsman, died suddenly Thursday night about 11 o'clock of a heart attack.

Norris, who was one of the founders of the Northwest Division of Federated Sportsmen's clubs and is very well known in the outdoor sportsmen's circles in this section, had been attending a motion picture show earlier in the evening, was seized with what was thought to be an attack of indigestion on his return home. On the advice of his physician, he went to bed and died within 10 minutes after carrying out the order.

He was to have taken office as treasurer of Butler county the first of next week.

Norris was one of the founders of the Sportsmen's Council of Division F, a forerunner of the northwest federation, at the charter meeting at Tionesta on August 3, 1933, a meeting which was attended by a large number of sportsmen from this section. He served as vice president of the council for a number of years and had served for a time as treasurer for the organization which succeeded the council.

Associated with Norris in the founding of the council was W. E. Hughes, of Oil City; Dr. H. L. Sanderson, of Butler; Herbert Borell, of Lawrence county; the late Judd N. Turner, assistant executive secretary of the game commission for a number of years; Howard Alexander, of Warren; John Hinebaugh, of Erie; and Charles M. French, of Ellwood City, commissioner of fisheries.

He was also the chairman of the committee for raising funds for the memorial to Dr. Joseph Kallbus, first executive secretary of the game commission. Norris suggested the memorial at a meeting of the Buck Tails in Oil City a number of years ago, and the movement spread throughout the entire northwestern section of the state.

During the latter years of his life, Norris devoted most of his time to his private life, being identified with the Butler ice and coal business.

Norris was born in Clearfield and had moved to Butler 33 years ago. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Josephine Norris; a son, George L. Norris, district game protector, of Warren; his father, George L. Norris, of Clearfield; a twin brother, Fred J. Norris, of Waynesburg; and a sister, Mrs. Ruth Tobias, of Clearfield.

A number of local sportsmen who were associated with Norris in outdoor activities are planning to attend the funeral services to be held Monday.

HISTORIC MANILA

Manila, prime prize of the Philippines, has come to one of its darkest hours clamped hard in the vice of a Japanese military machine pledged to wrest from the United States her most distant outpost in the Pacific.

The Philippine capital which rose from poverty to a flourishing position as a trade center since the Spaniards handed it over to the United States in 1898, was not too attractive until recent years.

It was built on ground almost on sea level at the mouth of the Pasig river and for years it was known as one of the most unsanitary cities in the Orient. It was cleaned up when the Americans took charge.

It has one of the largest land-locked harbors in the world, guarded by the island fortress of Corregidor, which the Japs have been attacking from the air. It has a population of more than 620,000, is the capital of a commonwealth made up of 7,083 islands with a population of 16,356,000 persons living principally upon eleven large islands.

Previously the Philippine capital had been occupied by the Spaniards in 1565, captured and sacked by the British in 1762 and returned by them to the Spaniards in 1763.

It was nearly 44 years ago that the American people were electrified by the news that the Spanish fleet had been destroyed in Manila bay in a dawn-to-lunch battle with Commodore Dewey's cruisers.

Passing the then lightly armed island of Corregidor, where big guns now guard the entrance, Dewey attacked the Spanish fleet anchored in the bay on May 1, 1898, and destroyed it to the last ship. The surrender of Manila followed August 13.

Americans may be cheered by a declaration by Chairman Connally, of the senate foreign relations committee who states there is "no cause for depression by reason of the fall of Manila. When we get ready, of course, we shall recapture the Philippines."

That incident at the Glade bridge Thursday morning should serve as a warning to others that it is not safe to prowl around a guarded structure in a suspicious manner.

The death of John Dingfelder, well known Spring Creek township resident, during the night, will be mourned by a host of friends throughout the county who enjoyed his boundless enthusiasm for every activity in which he engaged.

EDSON'S WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON
Times-Mirror Washington Correspondent

Washington, Jan. 3.—Budget estimates for running the government of the United States of America in the fiscal year 1942, which begins July 1, 1942, are about to be transmitted by the President to the new session of Congress.

This budget will be a dandy, and no fooling. It might reach as high as $50 billion, or approximately half of the estimated national income. The hard-working Budget Bureau, under quiet, serious, economist Harold D. Smith, has been adding up this budget since Sept. 15. Defense estimates have been raised several times since then, and the declaration of war has raised the total again. For the last month in particular the bureau's staff has been punching and its adding machines both day and night. And its enormous sheets of ruled paper, contoured with columns of figures, are the war maps for the battle of dollars which must be won before the battle of bullets can begin.

The 1942 budget was pretty sizeable. On Jan. 3, 1941, this budget, which the country is supposed to be operating on now, started out as a $17 billion baby, nearly $14 billion of which was to go for defense. By June the estimates for defense had been raised to more than $15 billion and the total was $22 billion. The estimate for 1942 goes to $50 billion, for this new budget message may give the first indications of the real size of the Civvies Program—the what-it-takes-to-win-the-war in terms of billions of dollars.

When Congress gets this message, the solons will have six months in which to argue about it before it is due to go into effect.
For congressional action, the budget, as a whole is divided into 11 sections, covering Departments of Agriculture, Interior and Labor and federal security, War, Navy, Treasury and Postoffice, Department, State, Justice and Commerce Departments, independent offices, District of Columbia, legislative establishments, and deficiencies.
Corresponding subcommittees from the appropriations committees of first the House and then the Senate go to work, hold hearings by the hour, and take testimony by the hundreds, and thousands of pages. Recommendations are finally made in the form of appropriation bills on which all the congressmen get a chance to offer amendments and to vote.

It is all this deliberate procedure which eats up the six months between the time a budget message is presented to Congress and the time it is scheduled to go into effect.
All those appropriation bills must be passed before midnight of June 30, preceding the beginning of the new fiscal year for the appropriation to be legal. But if in the meantime any department of the government runs short of operating funds, a deficiency bill may be presented and supplementary funds appropriated to keep the outfit going.

Give That Gentleman Twenty Silver Dollars!

A WASHINGTON DAYBOOK

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—President Roosevelt has not been surpassed but he has been equalled at a game in which he was heretofore supreme—the handling of a mass press conference.

The little man who tied Mr. Big was Winston Churchill, prime minister of Great Britain, who, in his own balliwick, never holds press conferences at all.

Facing enemy guns is one thing. Facing one's political enemies in debate is another. But facing a crowded room that includes some of the world's best reporters fairly drooling over questions to be asked is something else again. Looking back on it now, I can't tell you whether Mr. Churchill's masterly press conference generally pleased the newspaper folk or President Roosevelt most.

I HAVE a little hunch that the President got a big kick out of the situation. For going on nine years, he has met this journalistic horde twice a week. Many of them he can call by their first names and he knows the questions they are going to ask before they get out the first words. To him it's old stuff.

But he couldn't have failed to appreciate the pressure which his friend and colleague was under, facing the situation for the first time. Proof of it is that in front of the conference, he warned Mr. Churchill that he was up against an entirely different pack than ever confronted him in England. Your journalists in England, he explained, are lambs. These are wolves.

Then with what I am sure was a little bit of a gleam in his eye, the President put Mr. Churchill squarely on the spot by suggesting that he stand up on a chair so those in the back rows could see him.

IF YOU think that stopped "Winnie," think again. Up he popped, all grins. And as soon as the back rows got over their surprise in discovering that he had doffed his pea-jacket and jaunty seaman's cap for a black coat, striped trousers and a natty blue polka-dot tie, the applause rolled into a spontaneous cheer. "Winnie" had cleared the first hurdle.

The main point is that he never failed to clear one from there on.
He didn't answer every question without hesitation, but he convinced me and others that his hesitation was over search for the correct vernacular that would convey his exact meaning to the American people. He never was at loss for an answer.

Even when the questioning dropped to such a low level that he was asked if he still felt that the Allies would win the war, he didn't snicker or bat an eye. He came through with a good old Americanism that he might have learned from his American mother. He said: "I sure do!"

At another point, when a reporter asked what he thought Hitler would do next, Mr. Churchill still was in p. fact form: answering immediately that if there was any one in the room who could give him that information, he would be delighted.

AS SUCH twists around sharp corners came in the interview, any one who could get a sneak view of President Roosevelt's face could just it down that he was having the time of his life.
I saw Winston Churchill and Franklin D. Roosevelt and they both heartily admire each other, then they have put on the greatest act in history.

Perhaps the perfect touch came as the press conference was breaking up and the news corps, probably having stood before F.W.O. such word figures at the same moment for the first time in history, was breaking for telephones and typewriters.

After all, said Mr. Churchill, he felt quite at home. It was just like meeting the House of Commons. Those parliamentary house system, where political foes hurl their sharpest barbs at the Prime Minister on every occasion; still are chuckling over that one.

STORIES IN STAMPS

THE grand old man of baseball may never get his picture on a stamp, but as long as there is a U. S. baseball centennial commemorative in an album, 79-year-old Connie Mack will have a place in philately.

The stamp pictures the sand-lots from which Mack drew many of his stars. The name of Mack, backed by 58 years of baseball, is a part of everything connected with America's national game.

Retirement isn't in sight for the most respected manager of either league. Sports writers often say that he will retire from baseball when he wins his next pennant, or when he reaches his 80th birthday, but Connie has other plans.

"I will never retire unless it is absolutely necessary. If I did, what would I do? I'd be like the man without a country."

Mack entered baseball in 1884, established in the Philadelphia Athletics in 1900, won his ninth American League pennant in 1931, and was immortalized in the Cooperstown Hall of Fame as a "builder of baseball."

FUNNY BUSINESS

"He's got the shrewdest manager in the business!"

WEEKLY SERMONETTE

"THE PENTECOST LIFE"

J. F. KIFFER
Pastor Free Methodist Church

Text—Luke 24:29: But tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem, until ye are endued with power from on high.

Jesus had a good reason for sending his disciples back to Jerusalem for the occasion of Pentecost. He wasn't tying religion up with the city. In fact, Pentecost loosed religion from sacred places. Jesus, in conversation with the woman at the well in Samaria, when the woman emphasized certain places of worship, said, "The time would come when neither in those mountains nor yet at Jerusalem men would worship God, but they that worship God would do it in spirit and in truth."

Jerusalem, as the center of the then religious world, held some bitter memories for the disciples. Here with the crowd they cheered as their Lord rode triumphantly into the city. Here they declared their fidelity to Christ, even unto death. In that garden experience they failed to watch and pray while the destiny of the world hung in the balance. Here, Peter three times denied his Lord and all the disciples forsook Christ and fled. Here their exalted leader and king was dashed to earth and broken.

Back to the place of these and many other memories Jesus directed his disciples to go.

In the place of His death and seeming defeat, Jesus had triumphed, and He desired His disciples to succeed where they had failed. He knew if they would displace their failures with success, He could trust them to stand anywhere. Here was a religious problem being solved for His followers. To solve a difficult problem, attack it at the hardest place.
They were not to receive Pentecost in the quiet retreat. That is a good place for meditation, prayer or instruction; the Pentecost life is for strife, stress, storms and conflict.

Religion can take the defensive and hurt no one. After Pentecost the disciples took the offensive. They faced and charged the Jews with the murder of their Lord. Sin takes the defensive and strikes back only to be broken. The disciples smiled, sang and prayed their way through stripes, prisons and death. The world got hungry for their freedom, poise and power.

Though the church was on the offensive, yet it was winsome and compelling. Their weapons of warfare were new and effective. They were turning the other cheek, giving the cloak and going the second mile. Love knows no defeat. It never falters.

We try to hard to run away from our Jerusalem. Our failures are so hard to admit and face. Many substitute a change of location, but we can't leave our failures behind. They are part of us. The only remedy is to admit them and rise to conquer.

Usually our circumstances are not the cause of our failures but our innerselves. Our troubles usually lie deeper than the outer conditions. To be strong to conquer, we must overcome our weaknesses.

Try, try again, is good practice and a secret to success and victory.

The Golden Text is: "To the only wise God our Saviour, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever." (Jude 1:25). The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy. "Question—What is God? Answer—God is incorporeal, divine, supreme, infinite Mind, Spirit, Soul, Principle, Life, Truth Love. Question—Are these terms synonymous? Answer—They are. They refer to one absolute God. Question—Is there more than one God or Principle? Answer—There is not" (p. 465).

DO TIME FOR LOVE

By WATKINS E. WRIGHT

YESTERDAY: Lavinia made up her mind when she was sixteen that men and love were not for her—she would be a career girl and make a place for herself in the world. She would also make her Aunt Dorcas proud of her, and show her that she was not the only successful woman in the family. But there are Freddy Rand, who will not be downed, and Zoe Morton, Lavinia's roommate, who is deliberately encouraging Peter Raymond to propose—

Chapter Two Men Are Poison

"I'm letting my heart rule, not my mind," Zoe said softly. "When you're in love you—well, you just don't think." "Exactly," said Lavinia triumphantly. "That's just the point!" She drew a deep breath. "Getting back to Pete; why, he doesn't make a penny more than you do, and his chances of getting an increase aren't nearly as good as yours. I heard the floor manager say only the other day that you were one girl who really had what it takes to make a successful saleswoman."

"Saleswoman!" said Zoe. "I loathe the term—it makes me ill—it makes me sick!" "And another thing," Lavinia continued, "if you and a lot of other girls spent one-tenth the time improving your minds that you spend trying to improve your looks, you'd be a lot better off."

"But think of the fun we'd miss!" said Zoe. "Dorcas, darling, men like Pete wouldn't give us a second look. Believe it or not, girls' minds mean absolutely nothing to men in general." "Which," said Lavinia, "strengthens my argument that they are poison."

Zoe left the dressing table, and did a little dance step or two about the room, her chiffon gown billowing out around her.

"Just think," she said, her eyes shining, "Pete and an apartment all our own! Small, perhaps, but with touches of modernism here and there, and some of the best of the old."

"What, no geraniums blooming on the window sill?" said Lavinia. "Oh, shut up!" Zoe said. "You've got about as much sentiment in your makeup as that—that lion-hunting aunt of yours."

"Pete and a car! Pete and a car!" Lavinia flared. "Most apartments in the Bronx do have geraniums in their windows—or so I've been told. And that's where Pete will probably take you to live. Isn't it?"

"Just at first, maybe. When things improve we'll move somewhere else."

"Suppose Pete doesn't get raises—that things don't improve. It often happens, you know. What then?"

"We'll go on living in the Bronx."

"Suppose there's a baby—or illness?"

"For heaven's sake, Lavinia, do stop trying to take all the joy out of life!"

"I'm only trying to make you see what a gamble it is—marrying Pete."

"Thanks! I'm free, white, and twenty-three, and I know my way around."

"I wonder," said Lavinia with a shrug. Zoe walked over to the bed, and stood looking down at the other girl. "I don't know how you feel, Lavinia," she said gently. "About men—your Aunt Dorcas—wanting to make her proud of you, and all that. But, believe me, darling, take my advice, and enjoy the company of men now and then."

She bent down, studied her reflection. She fluffed her hair, tried it so that her ears showed, and then so that they didn't. As she did so, she remembered what Freddy had said to her that afternoon. "Men," she thought, "always getting mushy—even during business hours." But even so, she again arranged her hair so that her ears would be revealed.

She then returned to the bed, and took a book from underneath the pillow. As she opened it, she thought about her Aunt Dorcas, and how proud she was going to be when she got a letter showing how much her one and only niece had learned about those outlandish creatures which once roamed the world.

For some time she studied descriptions of Dinosauria and Dinotherium, trying very hard to remember that one group was said to have grown to the length of seventy feet, and that the other group had been remarkable for its pairs of long tusks, which were directed downward from the lower jaw.

She looked up from the book, and her eyes fell upon a picture of her Aunt Dorcas that stood upon a console table next to a woman! What a getter-around. "Running neck and neck with Mrs. Roosevelt, if you ask me!" Zoe had said.

Lavinia smiled at the memory of that.

She reached down and took a heavy scrapbook from the lower part of the bedside table. It was full of clippings and snapshots of one Miss Dorcas Wilhelm Prentiss. "Imagine fastening a name like that onto an innocent infant!" Aunt Dorcas had once said.

Just Horror
AND, Lavinia thought, not a bad-looking woman either. And the man beside her, gazing down into her face, was a romantic looking as a Hollywood actor. She had written this to Aunt Dorcas, when acknowledging the letter in which the picture had been inclosed.

"Dear Aunt Dorcas, my niece," Lavinia had written. "The man you mention is charming, and all that, but he was listening to me tell about the time a boa constrictor dropped down upon one of my guides. So you see the romantic look you thought you saw was not romantic at all—but a look of horror!"

Good old Aunt Dorcas! No time for romance!

Funny things, women. They had such different ideas about things. Take Aunt Dorcas, for instance. "Take heart, Lavinia, that matter, take heart. Now shut."

She stopped short, surprised to find herself thinking about Freddy Rand. And for no earthly reason, so far as she could figure out unless it was that she had suddenly remembered that Freddy had said, "Maybe you might do some handy now and then, especially if he could take you places without using the subway!"

She obeyed a sudden impulse and reached for the telephone. She asked for Freddy's number. He answered almost at once.

"Evening, Lavinia," said Lavinia. "Well, cut my hair and call me Samson!" Freddy exclaimed. "Just a moment, Lavinia. I want to pinch myself to see if I'm really awake."

"No talking nonsense," Lavinia said. "Do you still want me to go out with you?"

"Do I?" said Freddy. "Ye gods, Lavinia, haven't I been begging you for ages?"

"How about Sunday afternoon?" "Splendid!"

"You've still got a car, haven't you?" "You bet I have, and she's all shined up."

"Then will you call for me around two o'clock Sunday afternoon?" "Be there with bells on," said Freddy. "We'll drive down to Jones Beach and have supper on the boardwalk; we'll take a walk on the beach; we'll—"

"I want you to take me to Brooklyn," Lavinia interrupted. "To Brooklyn?"

"Yes. And then up to the Bronx Zoo."

"Well, I'll be darned!" said Freddy. "I can understand your wanting to go to the Zoo, but Brooklyn—"

"I want to visit the Museum."

"On an afternoon in early summer? Gosh, Lavinia, let's save the Museum for a winter afternoon."

"I would like to look at some skeletons," Lavinia said.

"Skeletons?"

"Yes. Of prehistoric animals."

"Then I want to see the animals at the Zoo."

"But, Lavinia, the beach is much better for us, and we can even take a swim."

WARREN, YOUNGSVILLE HIGH PASSERS SCORE VICTORIES

Dragons Easy Winners Over Falconer; Eagles Win From Massamen in 31-30 Thriller

While Coach "Heinie" Kolpien lay in bed, recovering from a severe cold which floored him this week and forced him to retreat from active duty along the basketball front temporarily, his Warren High school Dragons evened their books against Falconer High before a good sized crowd last night at Beatty gym by a score of 33-19.

Out to get their third victory in three, the Dragons gave themselves an even break in six warm-up games booked to prepare them for the Northern League basketball season. The Dragons took a 12-4 lead in the opening chapter, and after coasting through the second and third stanzas, ended last with a 13-3 margin to soundly trounce the Falcons.

Warren was badly out of condition, however, as the players readily admitted after the game, and had Falconer been able to hit the net with half of their shots, the outcome would certainly have been much different.

But with Dean Nelson leading the way with 10 points, followed closely by Martin Smith and Bob Wright, both collecting nine, the Dragons had little trouble in chalking up the verdict. Smith, for the first time in six starts, missed high scoring honors, falling to nine for the second time during the campaign.

Smith started the fireworks in the first canto with a field goal and four point, followed with another two-pointer, and then after Lawson missed a charity toss for the visitors, Nelson split the strings with a goal and Bob Lundquist followed through with a free throw. Smith failed from the foul line, and Lawson finally collected from the same place for the first Falconer point, but Bob Wright came back with a bucket for the Dragons. Studd hit the net, Walker dropped another foul for the invaders, and Nelson caged his second from the field to complete the scoring.

The second period went to Falconer by a 7-5 margin and they took the third with five points to three. But the fourth quarter stand made by Warren crushed all hopes from behind to claim the decision. Smith hammered at the goal with a basket, Wright made a gift shot and Nelson added another from the field. Wright scored a pair of four points and Nelson continued with another basket to push the Dragons way out in front. Studd then broke the silence for Falconer, getting a field goal and foul point for their only three points after which Nelson closed the scoring with one last basket. Reserves then went into the game for Warren and finished out in commendable fashion, holding the losers in check the remainder of the way.

Numerous fouls slowed up the game, Referee Jim Waples calling 20 infractions during the contest, giving both teams little time to go after baskets between shooting from the foul line.

Dean Nelson and Jim Urbanski were the outstanding passers for Warren, the former on offense and the latter on defense. Despite missing three free throws, Nelson was in there to make the shots that counted and Urbanski was representing Warren all evening on the backboards.

Tuesday evening the Sheffield Wolverines, who lost a close one last night to Youngsville by a 31-30 count, will be Dragon guests as the Northern League action opens, and plenty of excitement is in store for scholastic followers of the sport.

ALL-STARS WILL PASS IN EFFORT TO BEAT BEARS

New York, Jan. 3.—(F)—Chicago's professional football Bears, who got in the first lick of the 1941 campaign against the College All-Stars, will apply the finishing touches to the national gridiron picture tomorrow against a picked squad from their own play-for-pay league.

Shunted across the country by the war, the post-season struggle is the fourth in a series of annual affairs between the National League champs and the outstanding players from the loop's nine other teams.

More than 40,000 customers are expected to troop into the Polo Grounds at a top of $4.40 a head, with half of the gross going to the navy relief society. The kickoff is 2:00 p. m. (EST).

BABE RUTH IS TAKEN TO HOSPITAL TODAY

New York, Jan. 3.—(F)—Babe Ruth, baseball's former home run king, was taken to a hospital from his Riverside Drive apartment early today in a private ambulance.

He was accompanied by his wife and daughter, who later said he had been taken to an unnamed hospital for a "routine checkup."

The apartment house doorman said, however, that Ruth had been carried to the ambulance on a stretcher and appeared to be "a very sick man."

BOWLING CHATTER

Quickies . . . Minus their coach, Heinie Kolpien, who has been ill this week with a severe cold and confined to his bed most of the time, the Warren High Dragons nevertheless turned in a creditable performance last night in trouncing Falconer 33-19. The wolves are already howling for a Warren-Youngsville fracas at the Eagles' 31-30 defeat of Sheffield last night on the Red and White court. Joe Masser's Wolverines put up a swell game, but finally yielded to a whale of a basketball team in Coach Harry Stockdale's charges. Joe Louis, who meets Buddy Baer in a title go next Friday night in Madison Square Garden, has been given an honorary gold badge designating him as Deputy Sheriff in Hackensack, N. J., a gift from Sheriff William R. Browne. Dick Detzel, of Erie, was the best offensive back on the 1941 St. Vincent College eleven. He toted the pigskin for a total of 648 yards, averaging better than five yards per try. Wrestling is growing in popularity throughout the PLAA, it is reported, but from this corner it looks as though this area will be a long time in joining the move for the grappling sport. The University of Virginia, one of the first schools in the nation to sponsor a boxing team, will be host to the Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Tournament March 6 and 7. Craig Wood, National Open champion, who won the title in 1941 with an ailing back, is out of commission again with the same. Serving as professional at the Normandy Isle course in Miami Beach, Fla., he has taken time out for treatment.

Here's the story that won the National Liars' Club championship for 1941: "One of the natives of Unadilla (somewhere in the Sellar system) accidentally spilled a bottle of hair tonic in the river and all the fish started to grow long beards. Their beards got so long that after a while all we had to do to catch them was to stick up a red and white barber pole on the bank, hang out a copy of the Police Gazette, and holler 'next.' The above yarn was spun by Roger C. Cross, of Wausau, Wis., the new champion. He competed against 6,259 other entrants to win the title.

Above is the team that, after a so-so season in the National Pro League last season, in which they finished third after being rated as a leading contender, finally clicked in Chicago tournament to win four straight games and world basketball title.

"OLD TIMERS" EXHIBITION DISPLAYED HERE
RECENTLY WAS CLOSER TO REAL THING THAN MOST OF THE PAYING CUSTOMERS REALIZED.

When we watched an exhibition by "old timers" at halftime during the recent Warren-City cage opener here, which displayed basketball as it was played at the beginning of a new brilliant history, we agreed with the opinions of several fans that they thought the exhibition to be slightly overdone. However, after reading a recent AP series of articles on basketball, which started with the game in its earliest stages and brought it on through the years, perhaps the local youths who participated in the antics at intermission had the original game down to perfection. The sketch to be found below well describes the first games of basketball, and now we can readily understand why less men were decided upon to make up a team, why several rules allowing a certain number of steps, dribbling, etc., and prohibiting bodily contact were drawn up in short order.

DRAGON JAYVEES LOSE TO FALCON Will Battle Pattersons in SECONDS, 25-19 Exhibition on Beatty Court

The Warren High school second team lost the preliminary to Falconer's jayvees last night on Beatty court by a 25-19 count.

The "varsity" of Warren's jayvees held a margin over the invaders, but the recruits couldn't stay even and a fourth quarter rally of 10-4 fell short.

Corry topped the locals with 12 points.

They call them the "Cinderella" ("Dutch") Dehnert, the former team of basketball, these Detroit Eagles, holders of the world's professional cage championship, who play the Warren Pattersons on Beatty court next Thursday evening, January 8th.

Perhaps, but only perhaps, with good reason.

The story goes back to the start of the last season. The Eagles, with a star-studded lineup of former college stars, started out with hopes high in the National Professional Basketball League. But they didn't come up to expectations and, truth to tell, were about to be written off as the prize flop of the season.

Came the world's professional tournament in Chicago in March of 1941 and what happened? The Eagles went up against the Indianapolis Kautskys, who boasted Jewell Young and an array of other Hoosier hotshots in their lineup, Detroit won. An upset, the experts said.

They couldn't hope to beat the Harlem Globe Trotters, who were the defending champions of the tournament, in the next round, was the wise word. The Globe Trotters had one of their greatest equals in history and were well-nigh invincible. But beat them the Eagles did in a close, bitterly-fought game the fans who say it will never forget.

That put the Detroit aggregation against the crack Negro team that had taken the championship in the first tournament two years ago. Again the Eagles upset the odds, and found themselves in the championship title facing none other than the Oshkosh Stars. The latter had previously captured the National Professional Basketball League championship by sweeping through the Akron Firestones in four straight games in the title playoffs.

The real history. The heavily-favored Oshkosh team bowed to the inspired Eagles. The team that just couldn't get going earlier was now the holder of the world's championship—monarch of all it surveyed.

The basketball world was astounded. How did this team that had fared only so-so in the forepart of the season go through such a suicide schedule and come out on top?

An accident, some were ready to say. It was no accident. What the fans, and experts, too, did not realize, was that the Eagles were coming along, getting better and better as the season progressed. The coaching technique of Henry

Chapter 37
Dim Trail

THIS enterprising photographer named Ferdinand, he printed up a lot of the Reverend Henry an' his two daughters, an' sold 'em. An' because Juanita's runnin' away'd caused quite a flurry in town, a lot of people bought 'em. Mrs. Harris dug one out of her attic. She didn't know what'd become of Lucy an' the Reverend Henry, but I s'pose. Ascy concluded, "Lucy grew up an' married a Mr. Beadle."

"He was a ship chandler," Miss Olive said, "and he died when his family was brought up by his family. So my mother was actually born here in town. I wonder if perhaps that was why the place has always attracted me."

"You'll find," Ascy said, "that your grandmother's buried in the old cemetery. Mr. Philpot's wife is buried near her. Jennie— you were pretty hot on that, you were!"

"How does Ann come into this?" Mrs. Doane asked. "How did you find out about that?"

"Juanita married the music teacher, Marcy Joyce. They had a son, Marcy—I got this out of Rankin's papers. Joyce died of pneumonia an' Juanita left the child when he was a couple of years old an' was never heard from again. Joyce's family brought the boy up, an' he married an' had a son, who was Ann's father. She had other brothers, Mrs. Thorne told me, but they died in short. Ann's the great-granddaughter of Juanita Upjohn."

"I'm speechless," Cummings said. "What about this estate Miss Olive's heir to, Ascy?"

"Well, about a year an' a half ago—I went to Boston for this part, an' I got some Porter Motors directors into gettin' the dope from friends of theirs connected with the Empire National—about a year an' a half ago, a woman named Allstadt died in New York. Juanita Allstadt—"

"Juanita," Freddy interrupted excitedly. "Our Juanita, the one who ran away with Marcy Joyce?"

"Whoa up. She was the wife of Willem Allstadt, who was very rich, an' a famous yachtsman, an' after he died around nineteen-twelve, she went into seclusion an' got kind of queer. She didn't see people, an' didn't often leave her apartment, an' meals were left outside her door. She had one old servant, an' after the servant died, the apartment hotel folks had an awful time even gettin' inside her place to get it cleaned proper. She paid for everything with bills. An' when she died, it turned out she was rollin' in money, an' there wasn't no Allstadts left, an' there wasn't no will, an' the Empire National was pretty unhappy about it, all. Or her marriage certificate, Mrs. Allstadt was Juanita, an' when that got known, hundreds of folks named Juan appeared on the scene, an' the bank got unhappy than ever. Finally they hired Rankin to see if he could track down the heirs. An'—"

"I get it. He found out everything," Cummings said. "Our how did he plan to profit by it?"

"The Plan. 'I'll get to that. Then Rankin came down an' clowned around with Miss Clutterfield, an' then come the special broadcast, every one listened to, that Rankin knew about an' counted on—"

"Mr. Mayo," Miss Olive said, "d'you mean that when he walked downstairs with me, an' gave me a nickel for my dime to phone with, he had just shot Ann?"

"Uh-huh. Did you get the party he told you to phone?"

"No, I didn't understand that. He said I'd had a call, but there wasn't any such number, when I came out of the booth he'd gone."

"Just so. But he'd planned in people's minds the thought that you was alive an' well when you come downstairs with him, an' that he left before you come out of the booth. The number he gave you was a fake. Anyway, every body gathered around for the special broadcast. An' the laundryman come. An' just afterwards, Rankin went out to get his raincoat at the bathhouse. Washy told me, an'—"

"And he came back with it," Freddy said, and then he went off with the judge. Now, how did he get Ann's body downstairs? Tell me that."

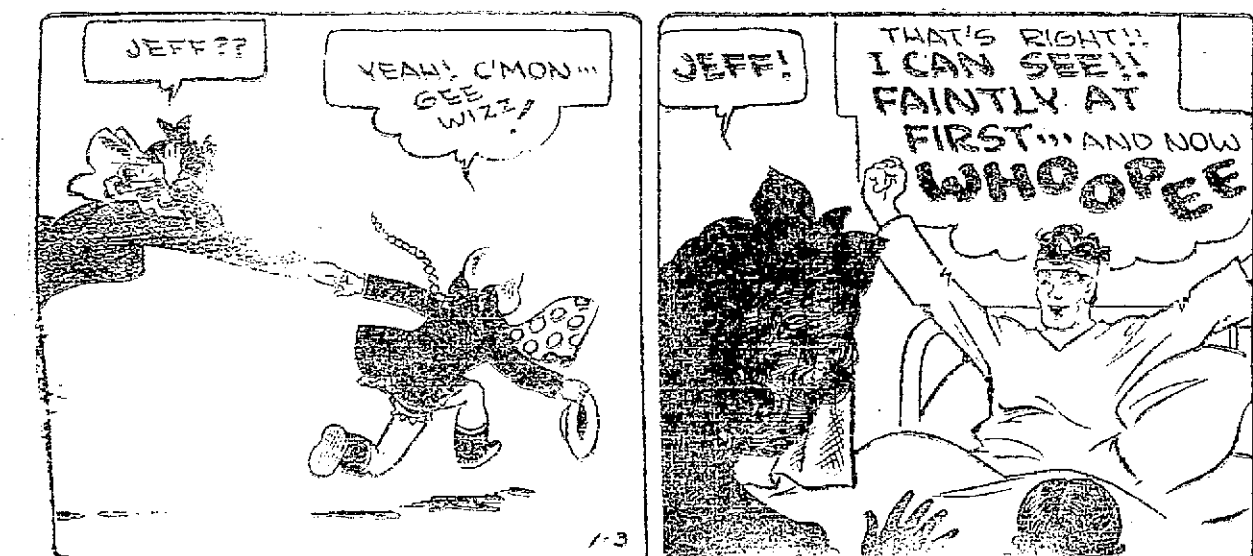

"Laundry chute," Ascy said. "I asked Washy if there was secret panels or passageways, last night, an' he said no. But I looked before I went rushin' off, his mornin', an' there's a laundry chute next to that narrow hall behind the phone booth. What Rankin done was to roll up his raincoat an' stick it near the house—say, behind a bush, or somethin'. Durin' the music part of that broadcast, he just went a few steps away, an' an' popped back in. He was safe as a could be. Everyone was listenin'."

Enemy Said to Be Using Naval and Land Forces

from the Japanese army headquarters on Luzon? That Corregidor was "subjected to joint attack by Japanese land and naval forces."

(There was no intimation whether a Japanese attempt to cross from Manila in landing barges or small boats. Neither did Domei specify the nature of the naval forces said to be in action against the powerful fortress.)

The Japan Times and Advertiser reported, meanwhile, that Japanese forces had completed occupation of Mindanao, second largest of the Philippine islands, where landings had been made at Davao.

(This report said nothing of Zamboanga, a United States naval station at the tip of a peninsula jutting southwest from Mindanao.)

The Times and Advertiser predicted that guerrilla operations against the Japanese might continue for some time on Luzon. The newspaper said Japan's success on Luzon, however, would relieve large forces for increased pressure toward Singapore.

Arthur's forces were in position to keep up a prolonged fight.

In Washington, the war councils of the United Nations sought to use every minute bought with the lives of MacArthur's men to bolster Singapore and the Dutch East Indies and to muster a mighty force for the eventual Pacific offensive.

Officials indicated that strategy had been the main concern of talks which culminated in announcement of the signing of the United Nations agreement by the United States, Britain, China, Russia and the 22 other anti-Axis nations yesterday. They said other pronouncements of equal, if not greater, importance than the agreement might be expected within the next few days.

Mashed from the Axis powers were any military assurances Britain and the United States may have obtained from Russia in the talks.

The exact location of General MacArthur's new defense lines was not disclosed, but within the area remaining in control of the defenders north of Manila Bay is an important highway leading westward to the rugged, otherwise trackless Bataan province, the link with the fortress of Corregidor and its subsidiary fortifications.

There was speculation that the provisional Philippine capital might have been transferred to Malolos, 25 miles north of Manila, the seat of General Emilio Aguinaldo's insurgent government in 1898. Military headquarters of MacArthur's troops was believed to be at Fort Mills, on Corregidor island.

This means eventual government requisition of private cars, Henderson said. He commented, however, that Germany and England had not yet been forced to surrender cars and said it was a "hot" question.

The CIO took full page advertisements in the form of a letter in Washington and New York newspapers to publicize its frequently repeated contention that the automobile industry had failed to enter all-out production of war goods despite labor's urging.

Taking these deficiency bills into consideration, a budget doesn't really mean much. Even if budgeted expenditures for operating the government were estimated at only $25 billion, deficiency appropriations for almost unlimited amounts could be asked for, and in the case of the War and Navy Departments, secured. The temper of Congress and the country is to give the services everything they need and almost anything they want.

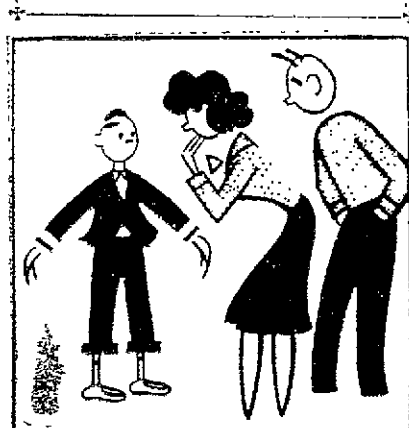

The only hope of saving any money on the budget is on the non-defense items which, though they total more than $6 billion, are somewhat chickenfeed when broken down into separate items of a mere $50 million here or there, and compared with the larger war cost totals of say $50 billion a year. There are, nevertheless, a few quaint individuals left who think about economy now and then, and they have sharpened their pruning knives to do a little whittling on what they consider nonessential, non defense spending.

National Economy League, a private organization, has submitted a proposal for aviation $1783 million. Brookings Institution has made a study to show how more that $2 billions could be saved. Below both is the report of the Congressional Joint Committee on Reduction of Nonessential Federal Expenditures, headed by Senator Harry F. Byrd of Virginia, and Representative Robert L. Doughton of North Carolina, which suggests cuts of $1301 million.

Opposition to these cuts or any cuts is certain. Senator Robert M. LaFollette of Wisconsin, filing the minority report to the Byrd-Doughton committee findings declares that to reduce expenditures of CCC, NYA, WPA, the stamp plan, the Farm Security Administration and similar activities would simply place a greater burden on the lowest income groups, who have not benefited from war industry expenditures.

This is the big pitchers' battle which the new Congress lines up for, and the economy boys have two strikes on them before they start.

HOW TO LIVE For Less

5. CHILDREN'S CLOTHES Feature Service

Buy children's clothes for utility, rather than style. Get serviceable fabrics for wear and colors to please their eyes. Instead of an overcoat for a growing boy, consider a windproof or gabardine utility coat with warm fleece lining. Buy clothes to be worn a second year, a size larger than they need. But never do that for shoes, lest feet be damaged. Repair clothes constantly and don't discard those apparently outgrown until you are sure they will not serve longer. Cuffs on a growing boy's trousers can be turned down and the trousers cleaned and pressed.

County Fire Departments Organize Auxiliary Service Under the State

Next Tuesday evening all chiefs and local training instructors will meet at the Central fire station to go over plans for a county training school, which will be put into operation shortly.

Every effort is being made by both state and borough officials to build up fire protection facilities to a higher degree of efficiency. Besides accepting applicants for the auxiliary fire service, the borough is also accepting applicants for the paid fire department. While no vacancies are contemplated, it is felt that on account of the emergency a suitable reserve list should be available and at the same time applicants could receive the same training as the auxiliary firemen.

The entire service operates individually and does not have any connection to politics, it is stated.
